

I would like to comment that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The Telephone Privacy law has improved my time at home and lessened my irritation, and the caller's time has not been wasted. People who take action to be on such a list are not good candidates to call based on their feelings on being called. They likely would never buy from someone who is infringing on their personal time and butting into my person like. I work shift work and had received 13 calls in one day!!! I counted them. Indiana's law has been a wonderful thing.
